JUDGE GEORGE M. THOMAS

Noted Republican Politician, Lawyer and Jurist Answers the Final Summons—Aged Over 89 Years.

Hon. George Morgan Thomas, the old Republican war horse and eminent jurist and lawyer of Vanceburg passed away yesterday at his home in Vanceburg, aged 89 years.

Judge Thomas for years was the leader in Republican councils of this Congressional district. He served as Circuit Judge in the Maysville district for several terms, was Solicitor for the United States Treasury, under President Harrison and also represented the Ninth district in Congress. As a lawyer and master-politician he had few rivals in Northeastern Kentucky, retiring to private life as a banker, wealthy and respected, only a few years ago.

One daughter survives, Mrs. Samuel
J. Pugh, of Vanceburg; one son, Mr.
Bruce Thomas, passing away several years ago.

Story of a Notable Career.

Judge Thomas had a remarkable career. He had practiced law for 50 years. In 1850 he was elected school commissioner of Lewis County and served 4 years. In 1854 he was elected
County Attorney on the Whig ticket.
In 1859 he was elected a member of the State Legislature and was re-elected four terms. In 1862 he was elected Commonwealth Attorney, serving 6 years. In 1868 he was elected County Judge for a term of two years. In 1871 he was a candidate for Lieutenant Governor and canvassed the State with John G. Carlisle, the Democratic nominee. In 1874 he was elected Circuit Judge and served 6 years. In 1880 he was defeated for Congress though he polled more votes than James A. Garfield did in the district for President.
He was appointed District Attorney in 1881 and served four years. In 1886 he was elected to Congress from the Ninth District and in 1897 was appointed Solicitor of the Internal Revenue department by President McKinlay, serving four years. He retired from public life in 1901.

The Judge earned his first money when as a boy he did steamboating at New Orleans for 50 cents per day.

Stories printed in the United States to the effect that Great Britain and Germany had concluded an understanding, aimed to curb the financial and commercial activities of the United States in South America, are characterized by the British Foreign Office as pure inventions.

A rubber belt 700 feet long, 2 feet wide, and tipping the scales at 5140 pounds, was recently made by the Goodyear Tire Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio. It is to be used as a conveyor belt. When made into a roll it made a diameter greater than the height of an average size man.

SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS OF NATURAL GAS.

"How long will Lexington have natural gas?" repeated George W. Church, the expert from Pittsburgh. "I should say at least fifty years. Some of our people think the fields we are now working are good for seventy-five years. You see, in the early stages of the development, you Lexington people were supplied from shallow wells in Eastern Kentucky. Now you are tapping West Virginia wells as deep as 3,200 feet. Why, we are now sinking a well in Pennsylvania that will probably go 8,200 feet." Mr. Church has been at the Phoenix for some time.—Lexington Leader.

IT'S UP TO THE DEMOCRATS.

The present session of the State Legislature promises to be a most interesting one. There is much work to be done, many knotty problems to be met and solved. Chief of these, probably, is the enormous deficit which burdens the commonwealth. Whether this unfortunate debt has been the logical outgrowth of our antiquated system of taxation, or whether the creation of a multiplicity of offices is responsible is to be determined. Both, we believe, were contributory causes, which may be removed, in a measure, by thoughtful legislation.

Whether it be just or not, much blame for the condition of the State's finances is being laid at the doors of the present Administration. It would be well for the Democratic members to bear this in mind throughout the session, giving their best thought and energies to the formulation of corrective measures, the accomplishment of which will serve party and State alike, silence the claims of extravagance being made by the opposition, and destroy the only available "thunder" of the Republicans.

At the risk of being deemed a "calamity howler" we predict that any failure of the Democratic Legislature to accomplish needed reforms will make rough sledding for the party in the next gubernatorial race. We hope that every member, regardless of party, will realize his responsibility to the State; we trust that every Democratic member will realize that, in promoting wise legislation, he will be serving the Commonwealth and his party as well.—Carlisle Mercury.

DICTIONARY INCREASES FOUR WORDS A DAY.

London.—Four new words are added to the English language every day, if the dictionaries may be accepted as a standard of measurement. During the last three centuries the rate of growth of the dictionaries has been 1500 words a year.

In 1616 John Bullock, the first English lexicographer published his "Complete English Dictionary," with 5080 words. During the later nineteenth century the "Imperial Dictionary," was issued with 200,000 words, and the "Century Dictionary," with a still larger number, followed in 1894 by Dr. Isaac Funk's "Standard Dictionary," containing 318,000. There have been several editions of this, but the one soon to appear will eclipse them all. This will contain 450,000 words.

HIS EMERGENCY TRIGGER.

Developments may cause Mr. Hobson to switch his campaign issue from prohibition back to the Japanese question.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

WHAT IT COSTS.

Reliable reports from Mexico are to the effect that cattle on the ranches, foodstuffs in the stores, resources in the vaults of the banks, are almost gone. If peace should come tomorrow and if all the Mexicans should go at once to productive occupations, a lifetime work would be necessary to put Mexico back on the basis she occupied when Madero was murdered by Huerta and his allies.

That is what Mexico has spent in a year and a half and what her people must repay through a generation of hard work. It is a replica of the history of every country that has carried on its shoulders the burden and the curse of war. It is half a century since the United States had a war of any consequence, and yet sixty per cent. of our revenue goes in the payment of war bills—pensions, interest on war debts, the support of an army and navy.

Most of us are prone to complain sometimes because it costs so much to maintain an army and navy as a guarantee of continued peace, but when we stop for a moment to contemplate the heavy burden of old wars, we can not question the intelligence of a policy that would insure against new wars.—Owensboro Messenger.

THE DAILY NOVELETTE.

Lochinvar's Loss.

There are others fairer may be;
Lay your head upon my chest;
You alone shall be my baby—
Nothing, love, shall you molest.

(Being the true story of how Lochinvar Smidless became a woman hater.)

The rain suddenly and without warning, came down in sheets! Blankets! Bolsters! There was no such thing as running between the drops.

Lochinvar Smidless, the only human being in sight with an umbrella, walked along dryly in conscious superiority pleasantly aware of envious glances from pedestrians trapped under awnings and crowding the doorways.

Suddenly, hurrying along in the downpour, Lochinvar, descried the fair form of an umbrellaless girl. Even in that drenching rain she was dazzling to the eyes. Lochinvar hurried forward.

"Excuse me and I beg your pardon," he said, lifting his hat, "but as I have an umbrella that is plenty big enough for two, I hope you will not regard it as a familiarity if—"

The girl smiled sweetly, a smile that deserves a whole chapter in itself and will get it, thus:

II.

The girl smiled sweetly.

III.

But unexpectedly and all at once her smile hardened.

"Lemme see that umbrella!" she demanded, and seized the handle. "It is, it is! It's the one I left in the dentist's waiting room. Would you mind telling me how—"

"Why, you see," stammered Lochinvar, "of course, one never can tell, that is, I may have—"

"Crook!" she hissed, and, wresting the umbrella from him, strode athletically away and left him in the drenching, pouring rain.

And ever after Lochinvar Smidless was a confirmed woman hater.—Louisville Times.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Maysville People Know How to Save It.

Many Maysville people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Weak kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health—the slightest delay is dangerous. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has helped thousands of kidney sufferers. Here is a Maysville citizen's recommendation.

W. F. Lynch, 127 W. Third street, Maysville, Ky., says: "My kidneys were weak and the passages of the kidney secretions were scanty and painful. Having used Doan's Kidney Pills before, I again got a box and they quickly restored my kidneys to a normal condition."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Young men like to sneer at a "job" when they are holding a "position." But it isn't because a bricklayer's job pays five iron men per eight hours and a bank clerk's position pays one buck per 12 hours.

LILLIAN RUSSELL'S ANSWERS.

Miss W. K. C.: Lack of sleep affects a woman's looks at once. Woman is supposed to require eight hours' sleep. Sound sleep can only be had in a room where the ventilation is perfect—that is, where there is a steady current of air. Have a comfortable bed. Never sleep on the stomach, it hinders digestion. Never sleep propped up with pillows. Lie as flat as possible, with a small pillow or none at all under your head. Never sleep with the mouth open.

BE A GOOD FORGETTER.

In the January Woman's Home Companion appears a page of New Year resolutions contributed by readers. An Illinois contributor tells, as follows, what he thinks most important:

"To become an expert at forgetting, just to forget all the unkind acts, the deep wrongs, the mean words, the bitter disappointments,—just let them go, forget them,—the memory will become quick and alert to remember the things worth remembering, the mind given to beautiful things, worth-while things, and to remember always that I am in the presence of God, this is my desire for the New Year."

SELF-DENIAL AT TABLE

Is Hardest To Master.—Physician Says Not One Patient In A Thousand Abstain From Forbidden Dishes.

There are few people who like to admit their inability to live abstemiously, and yet one of the hardest things to practice for most people is self-denial at the table. A noted physician, who depends largely on dieting for the cure of disease, declares that after a practice of many years he has become convinced that not one patient in a thousand can, or will, withstand the temptations of the table if seated around the board when dishes forbidden to him are partaken of by others.

He therefore invariably insists upon his patients eating alone, or with those only who are pursuing a similar diet. Of course, this does not mean that a patient may not abstain once or twice, or a half a dozen times, possibly, but that he will not continue to do so through the days, weeks or months necessary to effect a cure. Some days he breaks over, partakes of the forbidden dish, and the work has to begin all over again.

The moral of this is that it will be much better to avoid temptation at the beginning, and when resolved upon a given diet to avoid sitting at the table when other and richer dishes are served. It is comparatively easy to breakfast or dine on simple dishes if others more tempting to the palate are not at hand; but let one be surrounded with puddings or pastry, with terrapin and lobster, with rich sauces and luscious salads, and the strongest are liable to hesitate and fall.

$5,000 FOR SEED
Mason County Clover Seed Club a Splendid Example of Combined Success—New Era In Sight For Increased Clover Crop.

The Clover Club after an all day session Monday purchased 475 bushels of seed, saving $520 on the purchase. Samples were submitted by local and outside seedsmen, The R. A. Holden Company, of Cincinnati, being the successful bidder.

Three hundred and sixty-five bushels of Red Clover purchased, will cost $9.00 per bushel, 90 bushels Alsie Clover will cost $10.50 per bushel and 20 bushels of Mammoth Clover, $9.25 per bushel. The price being for immediate acceptance and the deal closed, no more checks for seed will be accepted.

The R. A. Holden Company will sack each order separate, with tag attached stating amount of seed and name of member.

Members should make arrangement to call for seed Tuesday or Wednesday of next week, exact date will be given later.

The committee has a written guarantee from the Holden firm that shipment will be as represented. The Committee is to be commended for the patience and judgment shown in handling this knotty problem.

It is regretted that some of the members not understanding the arrangements made as to the $5.00 per bushel deposit, failed to mail checks in time.

A man can't fool his wife but once, and that is when he marries her. Adam wasn't the last man to have his happy home busted up by a snake.

The old-fashioned woman who used to have a good bowl every day now has a daughter who doesn't dare shed a tear because her cheeks are powdered up like a marshmallow.

Some men remind you of dogs. They loaf around and store up energy to chase things they don't want to catch. It is too bad that the Pool Killer isn't a Society Man. He could make an awful clean-up at some of these Tango affairs.

For richness, accuracy of settings and costuming and romantic atmosphere is superior to anything ever done by the Relair Film Co. As a novel it was supremely fascinating—a love story of spirit and adventures, where men took the sword and as readily died for their lady as eat a meal.

Under the Snow

(By Dr. A. G. Browning of Maysville, Being a True Story Stranger Than Fiction.)

CHAPTER II.

"In the night-time or the day-time he'd sally brave and well, though the summer lark was piping or the frozen lanes fell:

Knowing if he won the battle, they would praise their Master's name, knowing if he lost the battle, then the doctor was to blame."

But not this time: the doctor's wife was ill, and to go miles into the country, though never so urgent, could not be thought of.

For the self-same reason that I dropped pick and shovel on that rugged mountain side in California—more exactly, in the absence of any reason whatever, standing a test, I mechanically moved below and offered my services—expressed my determination to go.

I think the doctor, with cause, regarded me a lunatic. I gained his reluctant consent, however; secured his wraps, horse and equipments, got my bearings and started afresh upon a phantom journey.

Once outside, 'twas cold to last degree of human endurance, but grandly beautiful—a typical winter night. My guide, of whom I'd gotten but a shadowy glance, climbed awkwardly to saddle, gruffly bade me follow, and was full fifty yards away before I settled to work, making tracks after him.

With one exception, that proved my nearest approach to him thereafter. A "will o' the wisp" he came and went upon my horizon—up one hill, down another in very mockery, a "guide" better in the breach than observation.

We had gone perhaps half our distance: the cold was fearful and increasing; though a "forty niner" I was getting enough.

As if to arouse or re-animate, the doctor's frisky little mount suddenly shied, snorted hoarsely, wheeled around and was "homeward bound" before I was in command. Forcing him about, the antics were repeated, in a most unprofessional way surely: 'twas becoming monotonous: a very little, under circumstances, was abundance.

Prayers for such occasions had not been devised: else I'd failed to commit: else I'd forgotten: I saw my duty in the vigorous spur, with accompaniments, both loud and deep. With a vicious lunge he came near unseating me, and was rather glad of excuse to dismount in search of my hat which had fallen off in the skirmish.

I found my dismantled headgear—two of them! For a moment I thought it a possible trick of vision: but not so: there were surely two hats!

Here was food for thought, if not too deliberate: logically there should be another head for this extra hat. And plainly my festive horse knew or shrewdly suspected more than he could tell. He was in an ecstasy of fright, or the semblance as, with dilating nostrils and staring eyes he looked steadily in direction of a large oak, a short distance away.

With the full moon, clear skies and glittering snow, 'twas light almost as midday. A peculiar heap at foot of a huge tree, was outlined and arrested my attention: closer inspection developed a situation.

Half reclining, beneath a light covering of snow, was a human form. The head was bare: the face, with shaggy, frozen beard was upturned: hands stiffly clasped on breast. Brief examination showed respiration but a gasp, heart action running down; temperature subnormal.

I'd been schooled to emergencies; this was one, and pressing.

My phantom guide came back at this juncture, for reasons unknown. I rapidly explained that a man was dying near by, and earnestly begged his assistance.

"Dying!"
With that, the horror of it was too much for words, he bounded on his mule, and was gone! I never saw him more, nor heard aught of his midnight mission.

Freezing myself, and the poor creature at my feet essentially frozen: midnight and alone; the surroundings as strange and dismal as a far away gulch in the Sierras! It called for all there was of miner, doctor, or whatnot.

A yell, somehow generated, found vent, and vigorously! An echo came in mocking response! But I yelled again—kept on yelling: yelled for life and all there was in it—for myself and the freezing mortal beside me! I was growing fearfully, dangerously cold!

Fearful as was the situation there came a touch of humor, the sense of it not yet frozen. With my first transcontinental shout, dogs began to bark; horses to neigh; cattle to bellow; cocks to crow; owls to hoot—the whole animal world, caught napping on guard, seemed tumbling to make amends. The racket universal provoked a smile; mixed!

From it I saw a human voice—save one, the very sweetest falling upon my ear, to date! My horse heard and responded with appreciative neigh.

Several generous fellows quickly came and we soon got the unfortunate upon his feet—into feeble motion, at which, with vigorous but kindly thumping we kept him.

In moving about we turned up a typical bottle of the devil's own brew—a bottle of whiskey! Minus enough to explain the situation! Diagnosis: drunk and freezing, "Under The Snow."

All the same, we forced down the remainder, soon as he could swallow. Nor did we think of similar similibus curantur: we were out for results, not bolstering theories.

We soon had him beneath a friendly roof, between blankets and outside some needed nourishment. With this he bid fair to tide over this close call, take his place in line again, and fulfill his destiny, as allotted.

The me, the incident was one of many. To resume a life in extremis was alike a matter of duty and of pleasure. Such cannot come too often; the aftermath is, as may fall out. A warm lunch, with pleasant environment devoid of the entente cordiale: my hosts were of those I once knew and valued: the event of the night placed me in pleasing touch with the long ago. This closed the incident.

The following evening, while at tea with Doctor Blank, a messenger delivered a letter to my address, running thus:

"I can only glean out of my mental chaos that I craved — was well-high unto death, when of all others, in some inscrutable way, appeared and drew me back. True, I was seeking you, in a way: that is, I was insensibly drawn to the old sod, possessed of a wild wish or hope of somehow seeing you again. Twice before I have drawn near the ghostly remains of home longed for one more glance but, conscious of guilt, I, affrighted, broke away. For long years I'd thought all memory gone; or crystallized upon one fateful era, one crushing event which sent me reeling through time with the brand of Cain upon my soul, a price upon my head. But with your coming—for I overheard you, and know all—the flood gates are opened and I'm thinking as never before, in all the years.

"I yearned to reveal myself, to feel the cordial clasp of a human hand once more, and then to die! But it could not be: revelation to you might chance to be exposure to the world, a felon's cell, a felon's death. The shades of my father and mother forbade it.

"To the world I've long been dead: better so—far better, if so in fact. Some charred bones taken from the ashes of our dear old home and supposed to be mine, were the skeleton remains of your student life, you'll remember. The delusion has been my safeguard from all, save the terrors of my own guilty conscience. Let that mantle of oblivion ever rest over my imagined ashes, leaving me unwhipped of justice at the hands of man—to the mercy of my offended God!

"Overcome by the fearful cold and withered by unceasing remorse almost overlooking the 'old garden wall' as we knew it, there was just enough life in me to take one last lethargic draught and 'lay me down to die.'"

"You know the rest. With every man's hand against me if identified—the primeval curse overhanging me always, I go forth once more, homeless, aimless, hopeless! Farewell!"

"So near and yet so far!" Poor, generous, unfortunate soul! Goaded to desperation by imagined guilt, fleeing when there was none to pursue an objectless wanderer on the earth, was fate ever more cruel! Be it blind chance, psychological suggestion, or what not, leaving me in this aimless manner, never was creature less appreciative, more rebellious!

Thorough, prolonged search followed with no trace ever, of Bobbie Burns. There was brief wonder among those remembering him at his rumored re-appearance: that was all. The law of course took no cognizance, for the poor fellow was not amenable. Personally, I was content.

ELECTRIC SIGNS!

The distinguishing air of quality which a first-class Electric Sign gives to a store is the element which gives a sign its greatest value as an advertising medium and investment. The impression it makes is good. It blazes forth to the public that there is business enterprise, merchandise and methods up-to-date. It affects the entire atmosphere of the business district. The stranger says, "It is a live town," and publishes it abroad.

It is the Sign of the Times.
